The Mystery Interview

Mystery · Welcome Unit

👥 Ali (14, from Sur), his friend Eric, and the school magazine

On the first day of school, Ali found a note on his desk. It said: "Welcome to the WOW! Team! Your first job: write about the team for the school magazine."

"A magazine? Me?" said Ali. He was 14 years old, he came from Sur, and he loved science and nature. He did not know much about writing!

Then Eric came in with a big smile and a camera. "Hi! I'm Eric. I'm from England. I love football and taking photographs. I'm on the WOW! Team too!"

"Great," said Ali. "But how do we write about the team? We don't know anything about them!"

"Easy," said Eric. "We ask questions. Every good reporter uses question words."

The question words

Eric wrote a list on the board:

> Who asks about people. What asks about things. Where asks about places. When asks about time. Why asks about the reason. How many asks about a number. How old asks about age.

"Let's practise on each other," said Ali.

> Where do you come from? asked Ali.

> I come from England. When is your birthday?

> My birthday is on 4th March. What is your favourite hobby?

> Taking photographs, of course! Why do you love science?

> Because nature is full of secrets, said Ali.

The other members

Next, the teacher gave them two cards about the other members of the team. Ali read the first card.

"Manar is 13 and comes from Muscat. She loves to design things: posters, magazine pages and new ideas."

Eric read the second card. "Rosie speaks English and Spanish. She loves reading and writing. Maybe she can help us write!"

> 💡 Who = people, What = things, Where = places, When = time, Why = reason, How many = number, How old = age.

The mystery

At the bottom of the note there was one more line: "Who wrote this note?"

The boys looked at each other. "It's a mystery," said Eric. "Let's ask questions!"

They went to the library. "How many people know about the WOW! Team?" asked Ali.

"Only the teachers," said the librarian.

"How old is this paper?" asked Eric. It was new. Then Ali saw a picture on the note: a small light bulb.

"I know!" he said. "It's Mr Hamad, our science teacher. He calls himself an inventor. He always draws light bulbs!"

Mr Hamad laughed when they found him. "Well done, reporters! This year will be an adventure. Now, go and write your first page!"

That evening, Ali wrote his first magazine page. Its title was: “Seven Little Words: Who, What, Where, When, Why, How many, How old.”

Lesson 1-1 · Our Planet: The Environment

The Planet's Letter

Letter story  Unit 1: Our planet

👥 Ali, and a letter from the planet Earth

One morning, Ali found a strange letter in his school bag. The paper was green and it smelled like rain. It said:

> Dear Ali,
> I am your planet, Earth. I am writing because I am sad. I have some big problems. Can you help me?

Ali sat down and read on.

> My first problem is climate change. My weather is changing. Some places are too hot, and some have too much rain. My second problem is global warming. I am getting hotter every year. My third problem is pollution. There is rubbish in my seas and smoke in my air. People also waste energy: they leave lights on in empty rooms. And some people destroy the rainforests, my green lungs.

Ali felt worried. He was worried about global warming too. He wrote a reply.

> Dear Earth,
> I want to protect the environment. What can I do?

The next day, a new green letter was in his bag.

> Dear Ali,
> Thank you! Here are some things you can do to help: Save water. Plant trees. Switch off lights when you leave a room. Recycle paper, plastic and glass. Pick up rubbish. And use renewable energy, like energy from the sun and the wind.

💡 The opposite of waste energy is save energy. Solar energy is one type of renewable energy.

The WOW! blog

Ali shared the letters on the WOW! Team blog. Soon, his friends wrote back with their own stories.

Manar wrote: "I joined the Beach Clean in Muscat. I picked up more than 30 pieces of rubbish!"

Rosie wrote: "I made an oven out of an old pizza box. It uses only sunlight to cook. Free, clean energy!"

Eric wrote: "I planted a tree in my garden. In ten years it will be very tall."

Two lists

Ali made two lists for his class. On the left he wrote “Our planet's problems”: climate change, pollution, global warming, waste energy, destroy the rainforests. On the right he wrote “Things we can do to help”: protect the environment, save water, plant trees, switch off lights, recycle, pick up rubbish, use renewable energy.

A week later, one last letter came. It was very short.

Dear Ali,

I feel a little better today. Thank you, and thank your friends. Love, Earth.

Ali smiled. Then he switched off the light and went outside to water his little tree.

Lesson 1-2 · Modal Verbs of Obligation

The Energy Competition

School story | Unit 1: Our planet

👥 Ali and Eric, and their headteacher

The headteacher stood in front of the school. "Good news! There is a competition. The school that can save energy the most will win a prize!"

Ali and Eric looked at each other. "We must win!" said Eric.

After school, they sat in the classroom to make a list of rules. Ali held the pen.

"First," he said, "must and need to are for things that are necessary. We must close doors, so the cool air stays inside. We need to switch off the lights when we leave a room."

"Good," said Eric. "And mustn't is for things that are not allowed. We mustn't waste water."

Ali wrote it down: “We mustn't waste water.”

Good advice

"What about advice?" asked Eric. "Some things are not rules. They are just the right thing to do."

"Then we use should," said Ali. "We should take part in the competition. Everyone should help."

"And shouldn't for things that are not right," said Eric. "We shouldn't throw away plastic bottles. We can recycle them."

A funny mistake

Then Eric said, "Oh! We mustn't put our ideas in the school newsletter!"

Ali laughed. "Why not? Is it not allowed?"

"No, I mean... it's not necessary. The teachers already know."

"Then that's needn't!" said Ali. "We needn't put our ideas in the newsletter. Needn't means it is not necessary. Mustn't means it is not allowed."

💡 mustn't = not allowed. needn't = not necessary. They are different!

The plan

Their final list looked like this:

We must close doors. We need to switch off the lights. We mustn't waste water. We should recycle plastic. We shouldn't throw away bottles. We needn't put our ideas in the newsletter.

Then they added one more: "You needn't have a long shower every day. A short one is fine!"

For one month, the whole school followed the rules. Students turned off the water, closed doors and recycled plastic. Teachers switched off the computers at night.

At the end of the month, the headteacher made an announcement. "Our school saved the most energy in the city. We are the winners!"

Everybody cheered. Eric whispered to Ali, "Now we must keep going. The planet needs us every day, not only for one month."

Lesson 1-3 · Extreme Weather and A Frightening Experience

The Night of the Cyclone

Diary Unit 1: Our planet

👥 Khalid, writing in his diary at his grandparents' house

Monday, 7 pm

Dear Diary,

I am staying at my grandparents' house by the sea this week. It's very hot today, like a heatwave. Grandpa says it hasn't rained for months. "This is a drought," he said. "The farms need water." I'm going to bed early. I'm tired but happy.

Tuesday, 5 am

Dear Diary,

A big storm woke me up early this morning! The wind was very loud, and there was thunder and lightning. I couldn't sleep, so I'm writing to you. I feel a little scared.

Tuesday, 8 am

We watched the news on TV. The man on the news said a cyclone was coming! A cyclone is a very big storm with strong winds and heavy rain. My hands were cold. I asked my dad lots of questions.

Dad told me not to worry. "We are safe," he said. "We will do everything right."

The news also showed other kinds of extreme weather around the world: a tornado in America, a flood in a village, a forest fire in a hot country, a hailstorm, and a snowstorm in a cold country. I didn't know the weather could be so strong. There was also a volcano and a tsunami, a huge wave from the sea. Those aren't weather, but they are natural disasters too.

Tuesday, 2 pm

The rain is very heavy now. Grandpa took us to a safe room in the middle of the house, away from the windows. We have water, food and a torch. Grandma told us stories from when she was a girl. She remembers a sandstorm that turned the sky orange! My little brother fell asleep on my shoulder.

Wednesday, 9 am

Dear Diary,

The cyclone is over! I felt so happy when I saw the sun. Some trees fell down and the street has water in it, but my family is safe. We helped the neighbours to clean their garden. Alhamdulillah.

Thursday

Today my teacher asked us to write about an experience. I'm going to use you, Diary! My teacher says a diary:

> 💡 is written in the first person (I), is usually informal, describes what happens in the writer's life, and often describes the writer's feelings.

I wrote about feeling scared, then safe, then happy. I think it's my best piece of writing.

Lesson 1-4 · Reported Speech: Questions and Commands

What Did Grandpa Say?

Retold story  Unit 1: Our planet

👥 Khalid tells his friend Salim about the cyclone

When Khalid came back to school, his friend Salim ran to him. "I heard about the cyclone! Tell me everything. What did everyone say?"

Khalid smiled. "OK. But I have to report it. Our teacher says we use reported speech to tell someone what another person said."

Questions with question words

"First," said Khalid, "I was confused. I said to my dad, 'What is a cyclone?' So now I say: I asked my dad what a cyclone was."

"Why “was”, not “is”?" asked Salim.

"Because in reported speech we change present tenses to past tenses. “Is” becomes “was”."

"Then my dad said to me, 'Where do you want to sleep?' So: He asked me where I wanted to sleep."

Salim nodded. "And “you” became “I”, and “want” became “wanted”."

"Exactly! We change the pronouns too: “you” becomes “he” or “she”, or “I” when it's me."

💡 For Wh- questions: ask + question word + subject + verb in the past. 'Where do you live?' → She asked me where I lived.

Yes/no questions

"Then my little brother asked Grandpa, 'Do you know what to do?' There is no question word in this question, so I use if: My brother asked Grandpa if he knew what to do."

"Did Grandpa know?"

"Of course! Grandpa always knows."

Commands

"Then the wind got very strong. Grandpa shouted, 'Get out of the kitchen! Go to the safe room!' So: Grandpa told us to get out of the kitchen."

"That's a command," said Salim.

"Yes. For commands we use tell or ask + pronoun + to + verb. And when my brother started to cry, Grandpa said, 'Don't panic!'"

"So: Grandpa told him not to panic," said Salim.

"Perfect! For negative commands we say “not to”."

Salim's turn

Salim wanted to practise. "Yesterday my mum said, 'Close the window!'"

"So..." said Khalid.

"She told me to close the window!"

"And our teacher always says, 'Don't run in the corridor!'"

"He told us not to run in the corridor!"

Just then, the teacher walked in. "Khalid, how are you? Was the cyclone frightening?"

Later, Salim told the other boys: "The teacher asked Khalid how he was. Then she asked him if the cyclone was frightening. Then she told us to sit down!"

Everyone laughed. Reported speech was everywhere.

Lesson 1-5 · Climate Change and Animals & Giving Advice

The Animals' Meeting

Fable Unit 1: Our planet

👥 A polar bear, a giant panda and an Arabian tahr

One night, three animals met in a dream place, between the ice and the mountains. There was a big white polar bear, a black-and-white giant panda, and a small brown Arabian tahr with curved horns.

"Welcome," said the tahr. "I asked for this meeting because we are all in danger. We are endangered animals."

The polar bear's story

The polar bear spoke first. "I live in the Arctic. I hunt on the sea ice. But the sea ice is melting because of climate change. Every year there is less ice, so I can't find enough food."

"That's terrible," said the panda.

The panda's story

"I live in the forests of China," said the panda. "I eat bamboo all day. But scientists say climate change might make bamboo grow slower. If there is not enough bamboo, my babies will be hungry."

The tahr's story

"And I live in the Hajar Mountains in Oman," said the tahr. "My habitat is the rocky mountain. But there is drought. No rain means no plants and no water. There are fewer than 2,500 Arabian tahrs left."

"So few!" said the polar bear. "I don't want us to become extinct, like the dinosaurs."

Asking for advice

"We need advice," said the panda. "What should we do?"

The polar bear thought. "I think you should ask humans for help. They caused climate change, so they can help to stop it."

"Perhaps you ought to visit the schools," said the tahr. "Children listen."

"You could always write a letter," said the panda.

"If I were you, I would start with Oman," said the bear. "I hear the people there love their mountains."

"Why don't you go to the boy Ali?" said the tahr. "He wrote to the Earth!"

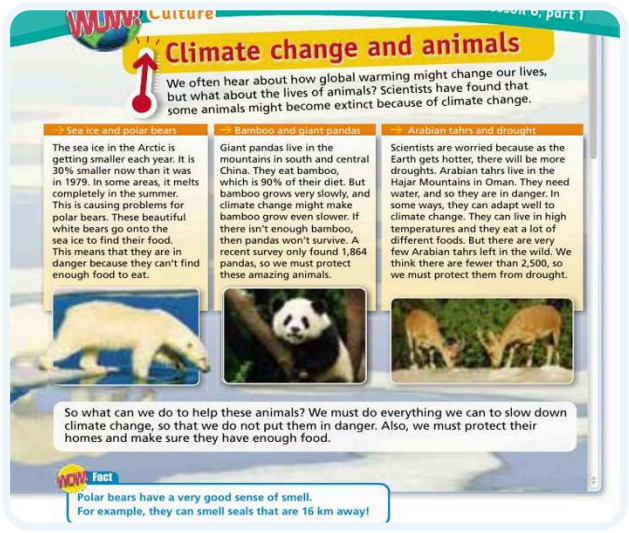

> 💡 Ways to give advice: I think you should... / Perhaps you ought to... / You could always... / If I were you, I would... / Why don't you...?

In the morning, Ali woke up and remembered his dream. He wrote a poster for his class:

> Save energy. Plant trees. Protect the animals' habitats. Don't let them become extinct!

Under the poster he wrote a note about pronunciation for his classmates: "We don't say some letters. They are silent letters: mustn't, shouldn't, lightning." He drew a small tahr next to the word “mustn't”: "We mustn't forget them."

Lesson 1-6 · Reading and Writing Reports

Ali the Reporter

School story  Unit 1: Our planet

👥 Ali, his teacher Mr Hamad, and a sad turtle on the beach

On Saturday, Ali walked on the beach near Sur. He found a turtle. A piece of plastic was around its neck! Ali carefully took the plastic off, and the turtle swam away.

On Sunday, he told Mr Hamad. "Where does all this plastic come from?"

Mr Hamad gave him a report. "Read this. A report gives facts. It's called “Plastic pollution in the sea”."

How to read a report fast

"It's long!" said Ali.

"Here is a tip," said Mr Hamad. "To understand the main idea, read the title and the first paragraph. Then use the diagrams to understand the information quickly."

Ali read the title and the first paragraph. Then he looked at the diagrams: a big bottle, a fish, and some numbers.

The facts

Ali read the facts aloud:

> We make twenty times more plastic than 50 years ago. Only 5% of plastics are recycled. Every year, 8 million tonnes of plastic go into the ocean. Small pieces of plastic can kill fish, and they are dangerous to turtles and seals.

"8 million tonnes!" said Ali. "A tonne is 1,000 kilograms!"

Then he read the most surprising fact:

> 💡 By 2050, there will be more plastic in the sea than fish!

"Who wrote the report?" asked Ali.

"A foundation: a group that works to help people or nature. They say businesses and governments must work together to protect the oceans."

"But what about us?" asked Ali. "Where does our plastic end up?"

"Good question. Why don't you find out?"

Ali's survey

Ali made a survey for his class. He asked 25 students three questions: Do you use plastic bottles? Do you recycle them? Where do they end up?

Then Mr Hamad showed him how to write a report:

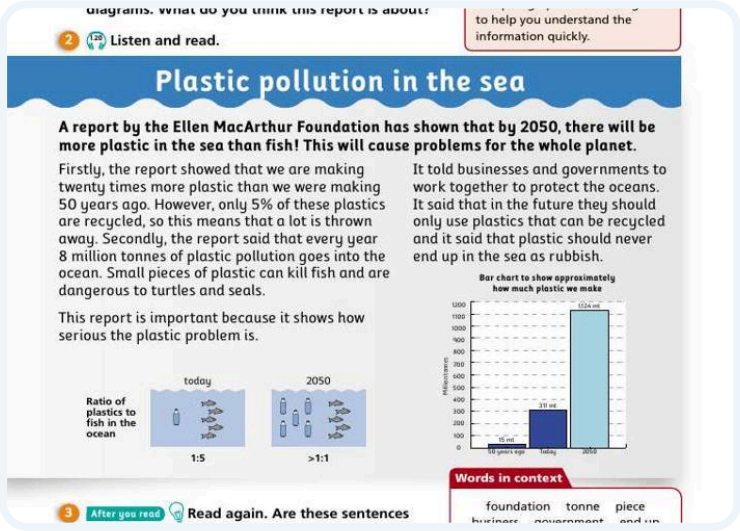

> Use a clear title. Start with what the report is about. Give facts and numbers. Finish with what we learned or what we should do.

Ali wrote:

> Plastic in Our Class
> This report is about plastic bottles in Class 8A. We asked 25 students. 20 students use plastic bottles every day. Only 4 students recycle them. Most bottles end up in the bin, and some end up on the beach.
> We learned that we use too much plastic. We should use metal bottles and recycle more.

The next Saturday, Ali and his classmates went back to the beach with big bags. They picked up 200 pieces of plastic. Ali didn't see the turtle again, but he hoped it was swimming in a cleaner sea.

diagrams. What do you think this report is about?

to help you understand the information quickly.

2 Listen and read.

Plastic pollution in the sea

A report by the Ellen MacArthur Foundation has shown that by 2050, there will be more plastic in the sea than fish! This will cause problems for the whole planet.

Firstly, the report showed that we are making twenty times more plastic than we were making 50 years ago. However, only 5% of these plastics are recycled, so this means that a lot is thrown away. Secondly, the report said that every year 8 million tonnes of plastic pollution goes into the ocean. Small pieces of plastic can kill fish and are dangerous to turtles and seals.

This report is important because it shows how serious the plastic problem is.

It told businesses and governments to work together to protect the oceans. It said that in the future they should only use plastics that can be recycled and it said that plastic should never end up in the sea as rubbish.

Lesson 2-1 · Extreme Sports

Eric's Bandage

Friendly argument · Unit 2: Adventure sports

👥 Eric, Ali, and Eric's cousin

On Monday, Eric came to school with a bandage on his arm.

"What happened?" asked Ali.

"I fell when I was rock climbing at the weekend. I hurt my arm. It's OK, it's not broken."

"Rock climbing? That's an extreme sport! I think some sports are too dangerous for kids."

"Not really," said Eric. "All sports can be dangerous. You can fall when you play football too!"

"I suppose so," said Ali. "But a football pitch is not a mountain!"

The sports list

Their teacher heard them. "Let's make a list of extreme sports," he said. "Put them in groups."

Ali and Eric went to the board.

"In water," said Eric. "Surfboarding, water skiing and diving."

"Up high," said Ali. "Rock climbing, paragliding and abseiling: going down a cliff on a rope."

"With wheels: motor racing, go-karting and mountain biking."

"And on sand," said Ali proudly. "Sandboarding! We do it on the sand dunes in Oman."

"What about horse riding and caving?" asked the teacher.

"Horse riding is on land, and caving is under the ground, in caves," said Eric.

Have you tried...?

"Have you ever tried any of these, Ali?"

"I've tried sandboarding in Wahiba Sands. It was amazing! And I've been horse riding with my uncle. But I've never tried diving."

"I've tried go-karting and caving," said Eric. "And now rock climbing... and falling!"

They both laughed.

Staying safe

"Ali, my cousin does motor racing," said Eric. "He's only sixteen. But he's always safe. He wears a helmet and special clothes."

"Hmm," said Ali. "So the sport isn't the problem. The problem is when people don't wear the right things."

> 💡 You can stay safe in extreme sports with a helmet and special clothes, and a trainer.

The next weekend, Ali went rock climbing with Eric and a trainer. He wore a helmet, gloves and special shoes. At the top of the rock, he looked down at the valley.

"Was it dangerous?" asked Eric.

"A little. But it was brilliant!"

"I told you so!" said Eric with a big smile.

The Picnic That Made Itself

Family story  Unit 2: Adventure sports

👥 Ali, his brothers, and their camel Zahra in the desert

Ali's family went on a picnic in the desert. Dad said, "This time, I won't help. You boys can make everything yourselves."

"No problem," said Ali. "We can do it ourselves!"

Making sandwiches

Ali started to cut the bread. "Ow!" He cut his finger. "I hurt myself," he said.

His little brother Saif laughed. "You need to be careful. Look at me, I can do it by myself." Then Saif dropped the jam on his clothes.

"Saif got jam all over himself!" said Ali. Everyone laughed.

The camel

Their camel, Zahra, ran around the tents. Suddenly, she fell on a rock.

"Oh no! The camel hurt itself!" shouted Saif.

Dad came and looked at her leg. "She's OK. She was just running too fast."

A grammar game

While they ate, Ali taught his brothers a game. "When the subject and the object of the verb are the same person, we use a reflexive pronoun. For example: “I hurt myself”. 'I' did it, and it happened to 'me'."

He drew a table in the sand:

> I → myself. You → yourself. He → himself. She → herself. It → itself. We → ourselves. You (plural) → yourselves. They → themselves.

"Now play!" said Ali. "Saif got jam on..."

"Himself!"

"Our aunt makes her own clothes. She makes them..."

"Herself!"

"The boys in the next tent built a fire. They built it..."

"Themselves!"

"Dad says to us: “Enjoy...”"

"Yourselves!" shouted all the boys.

> 💡 subject = object → reflexive pronoun: I hurt myself. The camel hurt itself.

By myself

After lunch, Ali saw some small birds in a bush. One had a string around its leg. Ali tried to help, but there were too many birds.

"Dad, I can't save them by myself!"

"Of course you can't do it by yourself," said Dad. "By yourself means alone, with no help. Let's do it together."

They took the string off, and the birds flew away.

At sunset, Dad said, "Well done, boys. You made the picnic yourselves, and you helped the birds. I'm proud of you."

Ali looked at his finger, then at the jam on Saif. "We made the picnic ourselves," he laughed, "and we made a mess of ourselves too!"

Lesson 2-3 · Geography Words and An Adventure Story

Grandad's Compass

Adventure · Unit 2: Adventure sports

👥 Hussain and his sisters Rahaf and Nada, and their father

Hussain and his sisters, Rahaf and Nada, went camping with their father near a small wood in the mountains. In the morning, Hussain had an idea.

"Let's be old-fashioned explorers! No phones. We can use Grandad's old compass."

"OK," said Rahaf, "but I'll keep my phone in my bag. Just in case."

The compass

Hussain held the compass. "The needle always points north. So behind us is south. The sun comes up in the east at sunrise, and it goes down in the west at sunset."

"Let's walk north," said Nada.

They walked past a green field with goats, and then down into a deep valley. The scenery was beautiful: high mountains, small trees and a blue sky. Far away, they could see the sea and a small bay.

"Look at the water," said Nada. "It's far from the beach now."

"That's the tide," said their father. "The sea comes in and goes out every day."

Help!

Suddenly, they heard a man shouting. "Help! Help!"

They ran towards the voice. At the edge of a cliff, they looked down. A man was lying on the rocks below. He had fallen down the cliff and he couldn't walk.

"Don't move!" shouted their father. "We'll get help."

Rahaf took out her phone. "Good thing I didn't turn it off completely!" She called the emergency number and told them where they were. Hussain looked at the compass. "We're north of the wood, in the valley, near the cliff by the bay."

The rescue

Thirty minutes later, they heard a loud noise. A helicopter came over the mountain! Men came down on a rope and carried the man up. He waved at the children. "Thank you!"

That night, by the fire, Nada laughed. "Old-fashioned explorers didn't have phones. Today, a phone saved a man."

"And a compass helped us to say where we were," said Hussain.

"So it's good that we aren't really old-fashioned explorers," said Rahaf. "We can use the best of the old and the new!"

What makes an adventure story?

Later, Hussain wrote this story for school. His teacher wrote on it: "Great! An adventure story is usually exciting, it has a setting (a place, like your valley), and it has a few characters. A character is a person in the story."

Lesson 2-4 · The Past Perfect

Which Came First?

Mystery Unit 2: Adventure sports

👥 Hussain and his teacher, solving the mystery of the late bus

After the camping trip, Hussain wrote his story. But his teacher said, "Hussain, the order of events is not clear. Which happened first? Let me show you the past perfect."

The form

The teacher wrote on the board:

had + past participle

"The past participle is the third form of the verb," he said. "eat → ate → eaten. So: “had eaten”. fall → fell → fallen: “had fallen”. hear → heard → heard: “had heard”. get → got → got: “had got”."

The use

"We use the past perfect for an action that happened before another action in the past. Look at your story:

After they had eaten their breakfast, they looked in their guidebook.

First they ate. Then they looked in the guidebook."

Hussain read another sentence. "They hadn't got very far before Hussain stopped."

"Yes, that's the negative: hadn't + past participle."

"And the man... The man had fallen down the cliff." Hussain thought. "He fell before we saw him!"

"Exactly. The past perfect action happens first."

💡 Two actions in the past? The one in the past perfect (had + past participle) happened first.

The mystery of the late bus

"Now, a little mystery," said the teacher. "Last week, Muneera's brother Khalfan was angry. Read and tell me why."

When Khalfan arrived at the bus stop, the bus had left.

"The bus left first," said Hussain. "Then Khalfan arrived. So he missed it!"

"Correct. Now this one:"

> After Muneera had eaten breakfast, she went hiking.

"First breakfast, then hiking. Good for her!" said Hussain.

"One more:"

> Khalfan 'd heard the news before his friends told him.

"What does “'d” mean?"

"It's the short form: He'd heard means He had heard."

Saying it

"When we speak," said the teacher, "we often stress the main verb, not “had”: After they had EATen... The man had FALLen..."

Hussain practised: "When we arRIVED, the bus had LEFT."

Hussain went home and rewrote his story. The first line now said:

“We had walked for two hours before we heard the man. He had fallen down the cliff the night before. Rahaf had kept her phone, so she called for help.”

His teacher wrote one word on the paper: Excellent!

Grammar table: past perfect

Comic dialogue  Unit 2: Adventure sports

👥 Two friends, Lucas and Frank, planning an adventure holiday

Lucas and Frank were planning a three-day adventure holiday in the mountains. They had a brochure, a map and a big problem: they never agreed!

Day one

"OK," said Lucas. "Day one. Would you rather go horse riding or mountain biking?"

"Hmm," said Frank. "I'd rather go horse riding. Horses are beautiful."

"Me too!" said Lucas. "Great. Day one is easy: horse riding."

Day two

"Day two," said Frank. "Would you prefer to go diving or hiking?"

"I'd prefer to go diving," said Lucas. "I want to see the fish."

"Really? I'd rather go hiking. I don't like deep water."

"But the sea is so beautiful!"

"So are the mountains!"

They looked at each other. "OK," said Lucas. "Let's choose like this: in the morning we go hiking, and in the afternoon I go diving and you watch from the boat."

"Deal!"

A small mistake

Frank wrote in his notebook: “Day two: I'd rather to go hiking.”

Lucas looked at it. "Wrong! After I'd rather there is no to: I'd rather go. But after I'd prefer we need to: I'd prefer to go."

💡 I'd rather go. ✔ I'd rather to go. ✘ I'd prefer to go. ✔

Day three

"Last day," said Lucas. "Should we go paragliding or play tennis?"

"Tennis? On an adventure holiday?" laughed Frank. "I think we should go abseiling!"

"Abseiling? Down a cliff on a rope?"

"Yes! With a trainer and a helmet."

"OK. Abseiling it is."

More practice

On the bus, they played a game.

"Would you rather go caving or abseiling?"

"I'd rather go caving."

"Would you prefer to go skateboarding or surfboarding?"

"I'd prefer to go surfboarding."

"Would you rather have a big breakfast or a small one?"

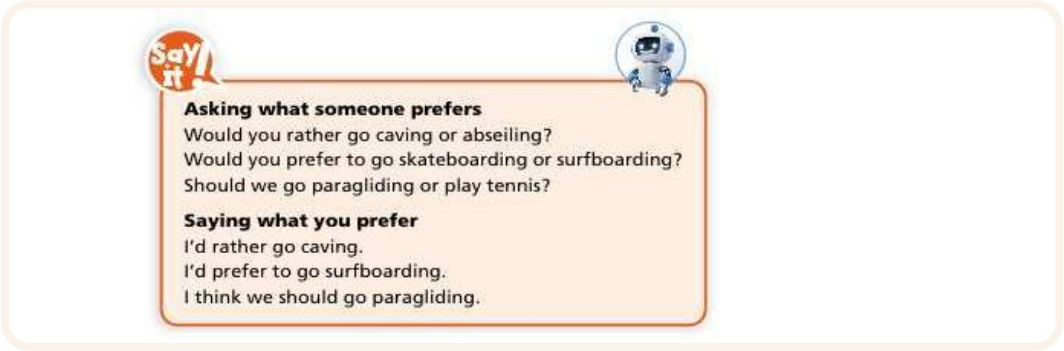

"I'd rather have a big one. Adventures make me hungry!"

Saying it well

Their teacher told them, "When we use the past perfect, we stress the main verb, like “I'd never TRIED it before”." So Frank said, "Before this holiday, I'd never TRIED abseiling!"

On the last night, Frank wrote in his notebook: “Day one: horse riding. Day two: hiking and diving. Day three: abseiling.” Under it he wrote: Best holiday ever. I can't wait to do it again!

Business story | Unit 2: Adventure sports

👥 Mr Saeed, owner of a water-skiing shop at Qantab Beach, and his son Rashid

Mr Saeed had a small water-skiing shop at Qantab Beach near Muscat. But very few people came. One evening, his son Rashid found his old advert:

> Water skiing. It is nice. The sea is OK. Come.

Rashid laughed. "Dad, this won't persuade anybody! Brochures and adverts are written to sell things. They need positive and persuasive words."

Rashid's plan

Rashid had learned how to write a brochure at school. He looked at an example: “Adams' Adventure”. It sold extreme sport adventures, safari adventures, climbing adventures in Salalah and the Himalayas, and polar adventures in the Arctic and the Antarctic.

"Look, Dad. Every page is exciting. Here are the rules:"

> Use a title to say what the brochure is about. Ask the reader questions. Use you and we to talk to the reader. Use exciting adjectives. Use short paragraphs. Finish with an interesting sentence.

Strong words

"Your advert says “nice”," said Rashid. "Don't use “nice”. Use excellent or brilliant. And don't say “bad”, say awful or terrible, but we don't want those words here! You can also use really to make an adjective stronger: “really brilliant”."

Mr Saeed smiled. "And what about “OK”?"

"OK is never OK in a brochure!"

The new brochure

They wrote it together:

> Water Skiing at Qantab Beach!

> Have you ever flown over the sea? Are you looking for a terrific day out?

At Qantab Beach, the water is perfect: calm, warm and really clear. The mountains around the bay are stunning.

Are you a beginner? Don't worry! Our expert trainers are gentle and kind. We will teach you step by step.

Are you already good? Then try our fast boats for a brilliant adventure!

Come and visit us this weekend. The sea is waiting for you!

💡 Brochures: title, questions to the reader, you and we, exciting adjectives, short paragraphs, an interesting last sentence.

Rashid printed one hundred brochures and gave them to hotels and shops. The next Friday, there was a queue outside the shop. A family from Nizwa held the brochure. "We read “stunning” and “terrific”," said the father. "We had to come!"

Mr Saeed looked at his son. "Your words are really brilliant, Rashid."

Lesson 2-7 · Culture: Ready for Something New?

The PE Poster Challenge

School story | Unit 2: Adventure sports

👥 Ali and Eric, and their PE teacher

The PE teacher came into class with three pictures. "Boys, are you bored of football? Are you ready for something new? Today you'll learn about three unusual sports. Then you'll make a poster about one of them."

Underwater hockey

The first picture showed players under the water in a swimming pool.

"This is underwater hockey," said the teacher. "It was first played in the UK in the 1950s. There are two teams of six players. They play at the bottom of a swimming pool. They hit the puck with a small stick into the goal."

"A puck?" asked Eric.

"A small, flat, heavy disc. In normal hockey it slides on ice. Here it slides on the bottom of the pool!"

"How do they breathe?" asked Ali.

"They come up for air, then dive down again. You need to be a very good swimmer."

Bamboo drifting

The second picture showed a man standing on a long stick on a river.

"This is bamboo drifting. It started about 1,000 years ago in China. You stand on a long piece of bamboo on a river, and you use a thin stick to move through the water."

"It looks impossible!" said Eric. "I would fall in the river in one second."

"It needs very good balance," said the teacher.

Cycleball

The third picture showed two boys on bicycles with a ball between them.

"This is cycleball. It started in America in 1893. A man called Nicholas Kaufman started it. It's football on bikes. But you can't use your feet or hands, only the bike!"

"How long is a match?" asked Ali.

"There are two halves, like football."

> 💡 Underwater hockey: UK, 1950s, six players. Bamboo drifting: China, about 1,000 years ago. Cycleball: America, 1893, played on bikes.

Comparing

"Now compare them," said the teacher.

"Underwater hockey and cycleball are team sports," said Eric. "Bamboo drifting is for one person."

"Underwater hockey and bamboo drifting are in water," said Ali. "Cycleball is on land."

"And cycleball is the oldest of the three games with balls," said Eric. "No, wait! Bamboo drifting is the oldest. 1,000 years!"

Ali and Eric chose cycleball for their poster. They wrote a title, drew two bikes, and added three facts. At the bottom, they wrote a question: “Can you score a goal without your feet?”

The next week, the PE teacher brought two old bikes and a ball to the school yard. It was the funniest PE lesson of the year.

The Jacket Adventure

Story · Unit 3: Spend or save?

👥 Ali and his older brother Majid

Ali wanted a new jacket for the winter trip to the mountains. His older brother Majid said, "Let's go to the mall. I love walking around the shops!"

"But I can buy it online," said Ali. "Online shopping is easy. You don't have to go anywhere."

"No chance!" said Majid. "I want to see it, touch it and try it on."

At the mall

In the sports shop, there was a big sign: ON SALE: 30% off!

"Look, Ali! The jackets are on sale," said Majid.

A shop assistant came to help them. "Can I help you?"

"Yes, please. I need a warm jacket," said Ali.

He tried on a blue one. It was perfect. Then they went to pay. There was a long queue at the till. Ali waited with the other customers.

"How will you pay?" asked Majid.

"With Dad's bank card," said Ali. He touched the card on the machine. "I can pay with contactless. It's fast!"

The shop assistant gave him a small piece of paper. "Here's your receipt. Keep it. If there's a problem, you can exchange the jacket or get a refund."

> 💡 Keep your receipt! You need it to exchange something or to get a refund.

At home

At home, Ali tried the jacket again. Oh no! It was too small around the arms.

"No problem," said Majid. "We have the receipt. Tomorrow we can exchange it for a bigger size."

The argument

That evening, the brothers talked about shopping.

"I don't like shopping," said Ali. "It's a waste of time. The queue was so long! I prefer to buy things online."

"But if we buy everything online, shops will close," said Majid. "And shop assistants will lose their jobs."

"That's true," said Ali. "I didn't think about that."

"And online you can't try things on. Remember your jacket!"

"OK, OK. But online, I can find second-hand things: things that someone used before. They're cheaper, and it's good for the planet."

"That's true too," said Majid. "Maybe we need both."

The next day, they exchanged the jacket. On the way home, Majid said, "I'm going to buy everything online from now on."

Ali stared at him. "Really?"

Majid laughed. "I'm only kidding!"

Lesson 3-2 · Zero and First Conditionals

If Ice Could Talk

Science fable  Unit 3: Spend or save?

👥 Majid, Ali, and a piece of ice in a glass

It was a hot afternoon. Ali put a piece of ice in a glass of water. Majid watched.

"Do you know what will happen?" asked Majid.

"Of course," said Ali. "If you heat ice, it melts. Always."

"That's the zero conditional," said Majid, who was studying to be an English teacher. "We use it for real situations and things that are always true: if + present simple, present simple."

More real situations

"Give me more," said Ali.

"If I need something, I ask my parents to buy it online. That's what you always do!"

Ali laughed. "And if something isn't big enough, you can send it back. Like my jacket!"

"Exactly. Every time it happens, the result is the same."

The future

Then Majid looked serious. "Now, the first conditional is different. We use it for things that might happen in the future: if + present simple, will + verb."

"Example?"

"If we all buy everything online, shops will close."

"And if that happens, I won't be happy," said Ali. "I like the bookshop near our house."

"Me too. Your turn: what about Saturday?"

"If I go shopping on Saturday, I will buy a new game."

💡 Zero: if + present, present (always true). First: if + present, will + verb (might happen in the future).

Unless

"There's one more word," said Majid. "unless. It means if... not."

"Show me."

"I won't have time to get the game unless I go this weekend."

Ali thought. "So it means: If I don't go this weekend, I won't have time to get it."

"Perfect!"

"Then: I won't finish my homework unless you stop talking!" said Ali.

Majid laughed and stood up. "OK, OK. But one last one: If you don't drink that water soon, the ice will melt completely."

Ali looked at the glass. The ice was very small now.

"Too late," he said. "If you heat ice, it melts."

That night, Ali wrote two sentences in his notebook:

“If it rains, the wadi fills with water.” (zero)

“If it rains tomorrow, we will stay at home.” (first)

Then he wrote: “Unless I sleep now, I'll be tired tomorrow.” And he turned off the light.

Lesson 3-3 · Imaginary Situations and The Second Conditional

The Wish Box

Fantasy Unit 3: Spend or save?

👥 Ali and Eric, and a poem

Mr Hamad gave each boy in the class a small box. "This is a wish box. Inside, write: “If I could..., I would...”. But first, read this poem. It's called “If you could...”"

The poem

Ali read it aloud. It had three verses, and each verse had six sentences. The first and second lines rhymed, and so did the third and fourth lines. In the poem, the speaker wanted to go to the Arctic, walk on the Moon, visit Ancient Egypt and become Sherlock Holmes, the famous detective.

"I like it," said Eric. "Everything in it is imaginary. It isn't real."

The second conditional

"That's why it uses the second conditional," said Mr Hamad. "if + past simple, would + verb. We use it for imaginary situations, not real ones."

He wrote:

If I could travel back in time, I'd go to Ancient Egypt.

If I went into space, I'd walk on the Moon.

"Who walked on the Moon first?" asked Eric.

"Neil Armstrong," said Ali.

💡 Second conditional: if + past simple, would + verb. It is for imaginary situations.

The wishes

The boys started to write.

Eric wrote: "If I had a wish, I would travel the world and take photographs of every country."

Ali wrote: "If I could be an inventor, I would invent a machine to clean the sea."

Their friend Salim wrote: "If I became a school principal, I would give everyone a longer break!" Everyone laughed.

Another boy wrote: "If I were invisible, I'd... hmm, no, that's not a good idea."

"Why not?" asked Mr Hamad.

"Because if I were invisible, I'd want to look at people's secrets, and that's wrong."

"Very wise," said Mr Hamad.

A question

Then Mr Hamad asked, "If you were rich, would you donate to a charity?"

"Yes, I would," said Ali. "I would donate to a charity that helps children."

"And if our football team practised more, would we win a cup?" asked Eric.

"Maybe!" said Mr Hamad.

Saying would

"In speaking," said Mr Hamad, "we often say 'd instead of would: “I'd go, I'd walk”. But in questions and short answers, we stress it: WOULD you donate? Yes, I WOULD."

At the end of the lesson, Ali added one last wish: "If I passed my exams with top marks, my mother would be very happy." Then he crossed out “if”.

"That isn't imaginary," he said. "I'm going to study and make it real."

He was angry. He wanted to shout. But his father said, "Calm down. Go back to the shop and make a complaint politely."

Eric took the box and the receipt. He practised on the way:

At the till, he said it with a smile. "Excuse me. I'm afraid there is a problem with these headphones. One side is damaged, and the cable is missing."

The shop assistant looked at them. "Oh, I'm so sorry. What would you like to do?"

"Please could I have a refund?" asked Eric. Then he thought again. "Actually, I need to exchange them. I still want headphones!"

See you soon,

Eric

The next day, Tom replied: “Hi Eric, I'm jealous! Next time something is wrong, I'll complain politely like you. Bye, Tom.”

Grandpa's Market Postcards

Travel story · Unit 3: Spend or save?

👥 Ali and his grandfather, a traveller and trader

Ali's grandfather was a trader when he was young. He travelled to many countries. One evening, he opened an old box full of postcards.

"These are my favourite markets in the world," he said. "Choose one."

The floating market

Ali picked a postcard with many small boats on a river.

"Ah, Muara Kuin Floating Market in Indonesia," said Grandpa. "There aren't any shops there, only shop-boats! People sell fruit, vegetables, flowers and fish from their boats. You buy from another boat."

"Can I go in the afternoon?"

"No! Get there before sunrise, because it's usually finished by 7 am. I woke up at 4 o'clock to see it!"

The big square

The next postcard showed a busy square with lights.

"This is Djemaa el Fna in Marrakech, Morocco. It's in the central square, every day. It's famous for leather bags and shoes, and bright bowls and cups. After sunset, you can eat delicious food and listen to storytellers."

"Did you buy anything?"

Grandpa pointed to his old brown bag. "This leather bag. I've had it for forty years!"

The flower market

The third postcard was full of colours.

"The Flower Market in Hong Kong. It's open from 7 am to 7 pm every day. There are many types of flowers, plants and trees. The smell is wonderful."

"It looks charming," said Ali.

The oldest market

"And the oldest?"

Grandpa smiled and showed a postcard of old stone streets. "One of the oldest markets in the world is Khan al-Khalili in Cairo, Egypt. It started more than 600 years ago."

> 💡 Floating market: Indonesia, before sunrise. Djemaa el Fna: Morocco, leather bags and shoes. Flower Market: Hong Kong, 7 am to 7 pm. Khan al-Khalili: Cairo, more than 600 years old.

Comparing

"Which is the best, Grandpa?"

"They're all different. The floating market is on water; the others are on land. The flower market sells plants; Djemaa el Fna sells leather and bowls. But for me, the best market is still our souq in Nizwa on a Friday morning!"

Ali decided to make a leaflet for tourists about the Nizwa souq for his English homework. He wrote a title, a short paragraph about the goats and the dates, and the opening times. At the bottom he wrote: “Come early, like Grandpa!”

The Scientist's Numbers

Science story · WOW! Learning Club 1

👥 Ali and Eric visit a scientist at a research centre

The WOW! Learning Club went on a trip to a science centre in Muscat. A scientist, Dr Nasser, met Ali and Eric.

"Today, you will think like scientists," he said. "Scientists use large numbers, and they explain how and why things happen."

Large numbers

Dr Nasser showed them a screen with numbers.

"Read them in English, please."

"100 is one hundred," said Eric.

"250 is two hundred and fifty," said Ali.

"785?"

"Seven hundred and eighty-five."

"Good. Notice: we say and after “hundred”. Now: 1,000?"

"One thousand!"

"And 10,000?"

"Ten thousand!"

"Last one: 375."

Ali wrote it on the board: three hundred and seventy-five.

💡 We say "and" after hundred: 785 = seven hundred and eighty-five.

The problems

Then the screen showed a factory with black smoke.

"Here, people burn fossil fuels, like oil and coal. Burning fossil fuels puts gases in the air. These gases cause air pollution and global warming."

Next, a picture of a forest with cut trees.

"Cutting down forests means fewer trees to clean the air."

The last picture showed brown, dying plants in dirty ground.

"Air pollution and soil pollution harm plants and animals. The plants can't grow in dirty soil."

Cause and effect

"Now explain like a scientist," said Dr Nasser. "Use these sentences:"

> This is causing pollution. This has caused pollution. This happens because of global warming.

Ali tried: "Burning fossil fuels is causing air pollution."

Eric tried: "Cutting down forests has caused problems for animals."

"The ice in the Arctic is melting," said Ali. "This happens because of global warming."

"Excellent!" said Dr Nasser.

A big number to remember

At the end, Dr Nasser said, "This centre planted ten thousand trees last year. Each tree helps to clean the air."

"Ten thousand!" said Eric. "That's a big number."

"Yes. And it started with one hundred trees and some people who cared."

On the bus home, Ali and Eric made a promise. "This year, we'll plant one hundred trees at our school," said Ali.

"And next year, one thousand!" said Eric.
